If man be a gregarious animal, woman to no less so, and requires a certain amount of intercourse with her kind for her best development, but the great mistake often made is that recourse. that pleasure becomes the bustness of life instead of what it was mount to be the recreation. It is impos-able that character should not deteriorate when such is the case.

Books intersecurse, kept in its prop-er position relative to other and higher things, certainly has a distinct influence for good. It broadens the mind; it brightens the intellect; it develops the power of pleasing and makes one the more agreeable com-panion. It even educates the love of one's kind by increasing our interest in one another. But when it becomes a "life"—"routel life"—and occupies the greater part of woman's thoughts, time and money, it is not only a sin, it is a crime against her own happiness and that of those nearest and dearest to her. It has been said by a wise Frenchman that "a happy people need few pleasures," and when the world sees a woman to whom social success in the sim and object of life it guesses pretty shrewdly that all is not well thome, and no woman wishes to make a present of such a secret to a captious and critical world.—Ladies' Home Journal.

William once ordered a number of the furmers of Easthampton to go over to Southampton to do a certuln piece of work on the Sabbath. Before that day came around, however, the commander happened to meet the parson, and told him frankly that he had ordered out his parish ioners on Sunday. "I know it, I know it," sald the

THE LUCK IN THE HORSESHOE.

How Iron Came to Be Regarded as a Pro tector Among the Superstitions.
Everybody knows that almost all our existing superstitions date back for their origin to heathen times. though they lave often been slightly or superficially Christianized at later periods so us to bring them futo harmony with the general body of public opinion. I think it probable, therefore, that when the horseshed superstition first mose people specially selected the horseshoe as the best available bit of iron to repel the attucks of trolls and fairies, witches or warlocks uml other evil fuflnences, because it had itself a certain inherent smetly of its own derived from its connection with a sacred

And later I believe this very same sanctity might help the superstition to persist, even after the religion of Christ had partially ousted the rellgion of Woden and Thunor, for dealers on guaranty for many years. we know that Christianity made very slow progress indeed among the mass of the people in England for many years; that heathen practices continued to be performed in secret by a large number of the pop- and the Cosmopoliulation, and that many usages es sentially heathen hold their place tan, a leading magato this day with our ngrienhuml

Now no class would be more like ly to retain such beliefs aml practlees than the class that has to deal most with horses and staldes a class who still firmly believe in all sorts of heathenish luckies mal un-

It seems probable, therefore, that in many cases the horseshoe was set up not only to frighten away the evil eye, ghosts and trolls, fairies and witches, but also, to some extent, to entry favor with the good old gods by what was in many ways a denial of allegiance to the new

It was as much as to say to the litthe folk on the one hand, "Don't come near; 'wate iron; we're under Thor's protection, and able to limit yon!" and, on the other land, to Thor, "We're still your men; we've never abjured you; take good care of us!" If this were not the true meaning of the horseshoe, I tlank we should have had a erneitix or the sign of the cross in its place, which is the ordinary and recognized Christian way of protecting one's self. against the attacks of evil spirits .-

FOR WEARING PEARLS.

Fromkling Laws in Old Venden to Hamper In 1541 the Venetian senate made it a benal offense to wear more thun onestring of pearls, and that had to be not of higher value than 200 ducats. Even this did not safisfy them. In 1562 they gave the law a corollary that was almost indecent and perfeetly udapted to enrage all the elderly matrons of the city. No women except the dogo's wife and daughters wero to wear any pearls after the tenth year of their marriage; nor were even young wives to wear more than a single necklaco of un ontside vulue of 400 ducats, the same to be duly stamped and appraised by the authorities. The Venetian women revolled ngainst certain other restrictions about dress materials. They were so ungry that they formed an alliance and petitioned the pope on the subject. It was the hest thing they could do, for his holiness annulled the obnoxious decree, which had emanated from the Venetian patriarch. Anon, however, they got to despise the various sumptumy laws which came upon them thick us unturnal

Nearly every one disregarded them. True, the executive employed spies whose business it was to go about "taking stock" of the people, measuring with their eyes the height of the value. Now and again a prosecution occurred. If the gown was at fault for its sumptuousness both the owner and its maker were fined. If a lady was found with more pearls on her person than was permissible she was liable to a penulty of no less than 200 dueats, of which half went to the

the state of the s NO MUSIC IN HER SOUL.

& Muther and Danghter Who Blad Few There was a big crush, as usual, to see the picture "Niagura in Winter." A steady stream of art critics chim bed to the third story of the great emperium where it is exhibited, and although it was yet early in the day 1,000 persons had made the terracide revolve. Rags, the newsboy, had managed to clude the man at the doer, and Diver, of the averue, was also there, but he had not been obliged to sneak in behind a female of ample proportions for fear of the Argus eyed janitor. A man stood in the throng enjoy-ing the great work of art, and hie aftention was attracted by a wearen was fair and forty, the child thin and sickly, but with large, hastrons eyes that sparkled with an admiration too deep for words as she gased spellbound upon the dark green bine waters hurrying over the falls. They had not been there mere than a minute when the woman excluimed:

"My, isn't it pretty! Ata't you glad, 'Liza, that we came?" 'Yes, mother, very," was the Metie girl's quiet answer.

Another thirty seconds, and the mother, evidently fidgety, and: "Now, 'Liza, I guess we'll go. I want to see some of those pages silks, and then perhaps those largets handkerchiefs ain't all gone."

"Couldn't you leave me here, mother, and I'll meet you down stairs in a few minutes!" and the little girl looked longingly at the pie-ture.

"Nensense, child, you've come chough of that. Why, I do declare, you're us bad us your father. He's always foolin round come junk shop lookin for an old master instead of attendin to his business. Leave you! Well, I guess not!"

And these two, with so Mette in common save their humanity, went their way, but the child turned her head for one more look as she crossed the threshold, -Boston Herald.

Brooklyn a City of Cate.

"You can call Brooklyn a city of churches if you like, but if I had the naming of it I should call it a city of cats." This remark was made by a western woman who was recently visiting friends in this city. She is a resident of Kansas City, and during her stay here was more impressed by the fact above stated than anything else. 'I never saw anything like it," she said. "Why, there are more cats, I believe, to the square foot in Brooklyn than in any other five cities in the United States. They seem to be everywhere. There are hordes of them in the streets on every hand and most of them are miserable speci-

Where I live a cat is regarded as something of a pet. Here they are simply regarded as nuisances, and the of kicks and hard words whenever they get in anybody's way. I am not greatly interested in cats, but since I have come to Brocklyn my enriosity has been aroused purely on numerical grounds. As near as I ean ascertain there is no special breed known as the Brooklyn cat. The ones here are just plain, half starved, everyday house cats, but there are lots of them."-Brooklyn

A Wrallh of Novellate. According to Mr. Andrew Lang there are about 100,000 novelists in Great Britain. This etatement is somewhat shorn of its terrors by the fact that out of this huge army of story tellers only 900 have succeeded in getting their works published. The remainder are still in the 'declined with thanks' stage of their literary careers, and will in all probability remain there. Mr. Andrew Lang takes a very discouraging view of the prospects of-fered by novel writing to those who propose to adopt it as a profession, the special gifts and training required being such as to render failure inevitable ln the case of the great majority of these candidates for literary faine. The reflections engreated by this condition of things one not pleasant, for they all point to a world of hnman suffering of the bitterest kind —a world of blighted hopes, of diffigence defeated, of despair and ruin, Strange it is to find so many people facing this fate for the sake of sacing themselves in print .-- London Telegraph.

It will be a great consolation to those who would rather mortify the flesh than he guilty of violating the laws of polito society that yawning can be includeed in under certain conditions, not only without compane-tion, but with agened benefit. No less an authority than Dr. Naegell says that it acts like massage, and is the most natural gymnastics of the lungs imaginable. He therefore advisos people to occasionally hold in aboyance their conventional prejndice, and if they cannot indulge every morning in what he considers the luxury of yawning, they are to do it as often as possible, and all the muscles of respiration will be benefited by the stretching, and many chrome lung troubles may thus be prevented. -Pitteburg Dispatch.

Fabriers Prices for Books. The most costly book in the world is the missel sent by Pope Lee X to Henry VIII of England at the time when the title Defender of the Faith was conferred on that much married monarch. For a number of years the book remained frown property, but Charles II, who had little use for missule, gave is to the ancestor of the Duke of Hamilton, in whose family it remained and a few years ago, when the Illrary of the duke was solder another. The miseal was pureliused by the German government which paid for it in each the enormous sum of £10,000. A much higher price fhan this, however, was once offered for a single volume.

In 1812 Pope Jalius II was in need of money and endeavored to borrow. He was at that time the possessor of a Ecbrew Eible, which for some denied to purchase. They offered to per weight in gold for the book, which was a hoovy that the united strength of two men sculd baroly lift it. The book was weighed and the estimate made of its weight in gold was $20,000. Initus deemed this murn inedequate and declined to sell, so that the Vationan Hebrory Bible is justly entitled to the detine tion of being the most valuable book in the world.—Million.

Warnen and Geverament. The semy and the navy, we trust, are only incidents in the progress of the race, but so long as they exist man has a prominence in the affairs of life. He is the executive arm in war, as, figuring as peliceman, he is in civil processes. And perhaps it was mevitable that, having this responsibility, he should make the laws regulating national life, and gradually all sorts of laws.

If we could get rid of the tromen-dons wer and governmental ma-chinery life would be a sert of piouso, and then women would come to the front again, for they manage a picnic much better than men can. "A man of refinement and onliure, | A Movement in Half-Dollars. [N. Y. Tribune.]

A Washington dispatch to one of onr centemperaries describes a financial transaction on the floor of the House in which none of the participants caught or attempted to catch the Speaker's eyes, and no report of which is found in the pages of "The Congressional Record."

It seems that the Hon. Jehn R. Fellows, being seized with what the ate John T. Raymond, after accumulating some other fellow's stock of half-dollars at the game of chance known as "matching," used to doplore as "the mad passion of gambing"-"strayed over"-it is a Demoeratic newspaper that describes it as straying over-to ex Speaker Reed's lesk, and laying down a half-dollar on the latter's desk remarked, jecularly: "I'll match yon for the half." Democrats in the interior, who have only heard of Mr, Reed as a "despot" of the first magnitude, will get new ideas of Cel. Fellow's courage from this account; for the Colonel seems to have walked right up to the despet's desk and planted down his half-dollar without the least sign of timidy, Indeed, the despot himself seemed cowed by the Colonel's ecurageous bearing. "Well, I'm afraid," said he-observe the confession of fear-"I'm atraid I'll have to go yen." Another half-dollar went down on the deek with a bang, and before the Colonel could adjust his spetacles to examine the coins the despot remarked, 'You have lost," and gathered both of them in. Instinctive v Colonel Feltows disputed the decision, and Mr. Dolliver, of Iowa, was called in Bull Ul to settle the question. He did settle it with the indicial fairness recognized by railroad stockholders as characteristic of the Iowa mind. In a firm voice he said, "I'll match you for the dollar." The despot consented, and the result was that the entire dollar became taxable as personal estate in; liwa. Presently Mr. Burrows, of Michigan, hearing of the transaction and having a landable desire to BOTH strengthen the resources of the Perinsular State, strelled over to Dolliver and causally remarked, "I'll match you for the two dollars." Result: The specie reserve of Michigan was increased by the amount of two dollars, and the feeling of indignation among the agriculturists of that State against the demonetization of silver was greatly intensified. Viewed purely as a financial opperation the result of this transaction, as any member of the Produce Exchange can see who will take the trouble to trace it through the various ramifiations and complications which attended it, was simply to transfer the original half-dellar-which, when in the possession of Colonel Fellows. might properly be counted as a proper part of the circulating medium, the NATIONAL NEWS specie reserve, of this great metropolis and money center-to one of the wheat producing States to assist in moving the crops. Almost in the twinkling of an eye, as one might say, it went by way of Portland, Me., to the great grain producing State of Iowa, whence after a pause of suffieient length to impart confidence and strengthen the tone of the market, it slid over inte Michigan, where it will undoubtedly render useful service in moving the cross. is will be noticed. too, that it accumulated strength as t proceeded, doubling up in geemetrical progression at cach stage of its progress. Had the movement continued until the entire House, including Mr. Holman' of Indiana, had enjoyed what is called in desultory conversation, "a whack at it" a sufficient sum might have been realized to complete the Nicaragua Canal after moving the crops. It all the transactions were in silver half-dellars it would also have the affect of drawing down the silver surplus in the Treasury. To Colonel Fellows the original transaction doubtless meant that he was a

'half a dollar eut," but when he looks at the whole series and takes the broader view of a statesman and political economist, ho will have much higher satisfaction in the thought that he has contributed so powerfully to the movement of the crops, than he could ever have felt had he given the half-dollar to John Chamberlain in exchange for applejack of the vintage

There is but one drawback to the satisfaction which this series of transactions so beneficial in the results to the grain-growing States gives to the reflective mind. There seems to have been an element of chance entering into each successive step in the operation. We are not prepared to say that you loo the sake of moving the crops Colonel Fellows was quite justilied in the abrupt proposition to mutch the despot for a half. Nor do we commit ourselves at this moment to an unqualified approval of the reply of the despot, "I'm afraid I'll have to go you." He no doubt felt goaded. And there is good Democratic authority for saying that he is very impulsive when goaded. It will perhaps be better to walt before deciding anything as to the point of morality until the Senato reaches some conclusion on a bill it is discussing with much lenrning and at great length which prohibits the sale of futures, because there is an element of chance in such sales that tends to fester "the mad passion for gambel-
